State, federal men test waste discharge points

By DENA BISNETTE

Testing to see if Edwards Bayou is capable of handling additional sewage effluent from a proposed linkage of the Bay St. Louis sewage system with the Waveland wastewater treatment plant is being conducted this week.

Robert Seyforth of the Mississippi Bureau of Pollution Control and Mark Johnson and Jim Harrison of the US Environmental Protection Agency's regional office in Atlanta are making the tests at stations located a quarter-mile apart in Edwards Bayou.

The tests will determine water quality in the bayou, which is currently the discharge point for treated effluent from the Waveland treatment plant.

The effluent from the Bay St. Louis sewage lagoon is presently discharged into Watts Bayou, which is also being tested.

However, a system proposed by the Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District that is currently waiting for EPA grant funding would transfer the Bay St. Louis effluent to the Waveland plant for treatment and discharge into Edwards Bayou.

The data gathered during the testing process, which ends Friday, will be added to information from tests at the Bay lagoon, the Waveland plant and Joe's Bayou, which was selected as a control site because it is relatively unaffected by the present discharge.

The results of the tests will be available from 24 hours to three weeks after the tests themselves and will be placed in a computer model to determine how the bayou will react to the additional discharge from the proposed system, Johnson said.

If the bayou does not meet state and federal water quality standards, a higher degree of testing may be required, Seyforth added.

Seyforth said Tuesday that a visual inspection of the bayou revealed few problems, but speculates that some tests may indicate a slight adverse effect from septic tanks in the area.

He said the elevation of some of the tanks indicated that they may not be functioning properly.

Some growth of algae, which may indicate too much effluent in the water, was seen, but Seyforth said it is causing more of a problem in Watts Bayou than Edwards Bayou.

Dye tests indicate water speed. Some of these tests were made Monday and they are expected to indicate whether the water moves fast enough to disperse the discharged effluent.

Most of Tuesday was used to select testing stations and actual testing started Wednesday, Seyforth said. Tests are expected to be completed by Friday.

Testing stations are marked with streamers, and Seyforth asked that fishermen and others who find them on the bayou leave them there until the tests are completed.

A visual inspection of the Bay lagoon, according to Johnson, "indicate that it

NORDA's outgoing commander cited with Legion of Merit

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Legion of Merit was presented to Capt. George T. Phelps, commanding officer of Naval Ocean Research and Development Activity (NORDA), during change of command ceremonies LEGION OF MERIT—Rear Adm. John B. Mooney Jr. pins the Legion of Merit on Capt. George T. Phelps Tuesday during NORDA change of command ceremonies.

Tuesday at National Space Technology Laboratories.

Rear Adm. John B. Mooney Jr. presented the award to Phelps on behalf of the Secretary of the Navy John Lehman for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services.

The citation stated that Capt. Phelps had provided a strong direction and the leadership required which enabled the youthful command to go from a fledgling research and development activity to an acknowledged leading naval laboratory in oceanography, ocean environmental and acoustic research and development.

Phelps relinquished his command to Capt. Roger P. Onorati, who assumed the command saying he could never resist a challenge and that he was looking forward to the job ahead.

Mooney, chief of Naval Research, said that during Phelps' four years as the commanding officer of NORDA, he had fulfilled a commitment to provide the atmosphere and the leadership to bring NORDA to the maximum of efficiency.

"As a result, NORDA is better prepared to fulfill its mission and to contribute to the Navy's readiness," he added.

Mooney also said the U.S. Navy is more ready today than it has ever been in peacetime and that NORDA can be justified in taking some of the credit for this readiness.

"Because of the growth in research and exploration in the world's oceans, and the rapidly increasing dependence of the U.S. national security on the seas, the secretary of the Navy and the Chief of Naval Operations, have called for a major reinvigoration of the Navy's efforts in oceanography," Mooney said, "NORDA will get some of this action."

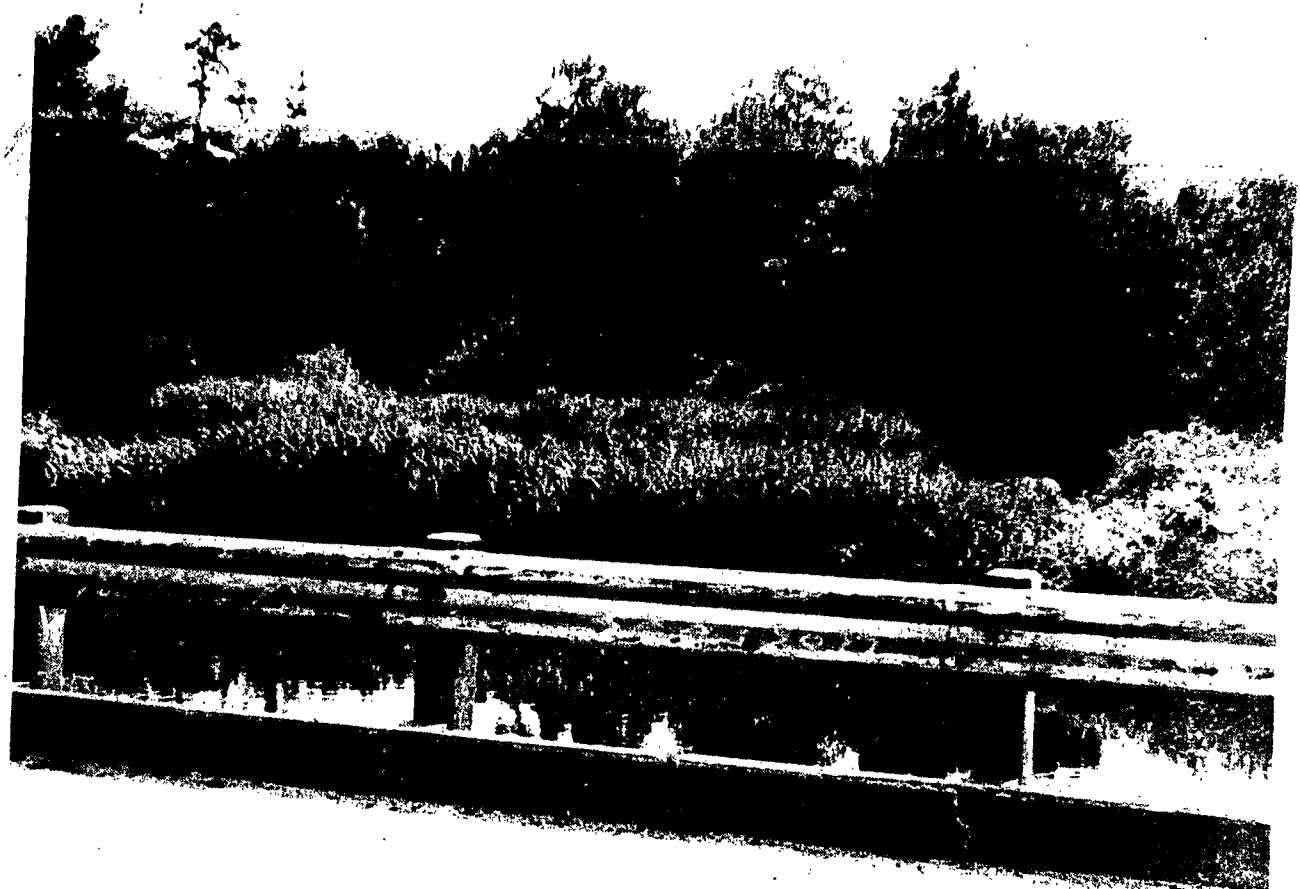

The renewed navy commitment to a strong oceanography program is presenting NORDA with new opportunities, he said.

"With its scientific talent and with its now-available physical resources, NORDA is in a position to expand the tech base in oceanography...in such fields as space oceanography, ocean

United Way opens $45,000 drive

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The annual kick-off breakfast for the United Way of Hancock County was held on Tuesday.

There are 15 agencies served by Hancock County United Way which has a goal of $45,000 for the 1984 campaign which will fund 1985.

Hilda Bourg, 1984 campaign chairman, who also served as the 1983 chairman, said, "Each agency we fund's work can be seen here in the county except the USO which is worldwide and it serves our military and their families."

"In 1983 we reached our goal for the campaign and were able to increase the amount given to each agency and that enabled them to offer more services to our people," Bourg added.

Rob Hubbard is chairman-elect for the 1984 fund drive.

Norton Haas, president of the Hancock United Way since its beginning in 1964, stated, "The United Way in Hancock County works only through the help of so many people, and NSTL plays a very important part in our drive."

Military and governmental employees at NSTL and along the coast pledge to the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) which in turn distributes the contributions to the respective United Way Agencies in the area according to residency.

Haas did mention how Boy and Girl Scouts are our largest funded agencies in Hancock County and how he has been directly involved in scouting since 1931.

May Beyer, executive secretary of the Hancock County United Way, was recognized by Haas as being one of the founders of the organization in the county.

Pat Harvill, breakfast chairman, showed a film on the workings of the United Way narrated by Merlin Olson.

Two charged in burglaries

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two juveniles were arrested on Monday in connection with two recent burglaries at Gulfview School in Pearlinton.

Hancock County Investigator Delbert Seay said, "Two juveniles who were charged with three breaking and entering charges were arrested on Monday and turned over to juvenile authorities."

"They were charged with entering Gulfview School on September 10 and 22 in addition to entering a Shoreline Park mobile home," Seay stated.

Seay who is in charge of the case is assisted by David Garcia, Hancock deputy sheriff, and Ronald Garcia, Hancock auxiliary deputy sheriff.

In other police matters, a Pearlinton resident is being held in the Hancock County jail for St. Tammany Parish officials in connection with the theft and stripping of a vehicle.

Hancock Sheriff Ronald Peterson said, "Travis J. Keller, 25, 330 Jacksonville Drive, Pearlinton, was arrested on Tuesday and charged with possession and receiving stolen property."

The sheriff's office received a telephone call reporting unusual activity was happening behind Oak Harbor Estates in Pearlinton, Peterson stated.

Hancock Deputies Glen Strong and David Garcia dispatched to the area discovered a van bogged in the woods.

Strong said upon their checking the vehicle they saw suspicious items in it and checking revealed a truck further in the woods which had been stripped.

The stripped vehicle was alleged to have been stolen in St. Tammany Parish and Keller is being held for the Louisiana officials for car theft, Peterson said.

Hancock Investigator Alvin Ladner is in charge of the case.

Keller's Hancock County bond was set at $50,000.

Power outage set for Friday

Mississippi Power Co. has scheduled an interruption of electric service in Waveland on Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., according to Bernard Jacob, the utility's Bay St. Louis area supervisor.

The outage will affect customers north and south of US-90 from Waveland Avenue west to Asher's Store, from US-90 south on Lower Bay Road to, and including, Clermont Harbor and Buccaneer State Park, and from US-90 south on Waveland Avenue to Phillip Street, including Our Shopping Center Plaza.

If bad weather prevents the crews from doing the work Friday, it will be done Saturday between 9 and 11 a.m.

UNO offers workshop

"Management Skills for Women in Business," a one-day seminar designed to help women master the skills essential to business success, will be conducted in September by the University of New Orleans.

The seminar, sponsored by the UNO College of Business Administration, will be held Sept. 21 at the Holiday Inn South, Lafayette, La.; Sept. 25 in the Queen and Crescent building, 344 Camp St., New Orleans; and Sept. 27 at the Sheraton Hotel, 6th and Ferry, Little Rock, Ar. Each program will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Dr. Shelia P. Gant, president of Gant & Associates Consultants, will conduct the programs. Dr. Gant is a former associate of the Clary Institute, a Washington, D.C., based consulting firm specializing in program development and evaluation, training, technical assistance and organizational development.

She has also served as director and training officer of the Utah Intergovernmental Personnel Agency.

The seminar will consider such topics as how to capitalize on management strengths and minimize weaknesses; streamline workloads; motivate co-workers and subordinates; and deal with the challenges and problems unique to women in business.

For more information on the programs, call UNO at (504) 286-6665.

Slidell engineering firm opens Diamondhead office

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Hancock County center of operations for Borgen Engineering, Inc. of Slidell opened last week in Diamondhead.

"We are a full-service operation and can carry a project from start to finish," Manager Carlos Cordon said.

In addition to five fully-equipped survey crews, Cordon said, the corporation employs civil, structural and electrical engineers, architects, engineering technicians and draftsmen.

According to Cordon, Borgen Engineering has already completed a large amount of work in the Diamondhead area.

"We have always wanted to do more work here (in Hancock County)," Cordon said, "Being here was our primary concern, we knew that once we were here we could get the work."

He said the recent selection (June 1984) of Borgen Engineering as the engineering firm for the Port and Harbor Commission had really opened up the possibilities.

Cordon said the firm is in the middle of a large project at the Stennis International Airport which includes the construction of an elevated water storage tank, a water well, a sewage and collection treatment plant, drainage work and roadway repairs.

Borgen Engineering will oversee construction of the entire project and Cordon estimates the completion date to be in June of 1985.

In addition to being the manager of the Diamondhead office, Cordon is the manager of engineering for Borgen Engineering. He is a graduate of Mississippi State University and has worked for several years in Mississippi.

Pennsylvania pigeons are literally burning bridges behind them, reports 'National Wildlife' magazine. Apparently, pigeon droppings mix with rain to form acids potent enough to eat through steel girders. According to state bridge engineer Jerry Jackson, over several decades the droppings rot the steel, weakening structures to the point where a weight limit must be imposed or the bridges closed altogether.

Safety expert warns consumers about cleaning dangers

A farm safety expert is warning consumers against potential dangers in operating a farm-related cleaning apparatus that has been linked to six electrical deaths nationwide.

About 136,000 electric pressure washers have been sold since mid-1983 for farm-related use in states including Mississippi, said Dannie Reed, a farm safety specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Britt Tech Corporation of Britt, Iowa, the parent company that manufactures the portable washers, has agreed to provide kits to modify the metal handle on the washer. Misuse and faults in the system have been linked to six electrical deaths nationwide.

The electric pressure washers produce a high pressure stream of water and are used frequently to clean farm buildings and machinery. The washers also are used to clean houses and other buildings and to prepare them for painting, and to clean shutters, patios and driveways.

The pressure washers have been distributed nationally under the trade names Liquid Brush, Kleen King and several other private label trade names. Ford Tractor Company, John Deere and Massey Ferguson also have sold the washers.

Reed said although no figures are available on the number of the washers sold in Mississippi are available, some of the 136,000 units sold nationwide were sold in the state.

"There are more than a dozen trade names under which the pressure washers are sold," Reed said. "The danger of electric shock is possible on any washer of this type."

Companies, in addition to Liquid Brush and Kleen King that have sold the washers, include Amity, Atlas, Chardon Lab's Power Edge, Continental Oil's Dynalife, Craft Tool and Machine, Earl Grissmer's Blue Lustre Dirt Buster, Gulf's Crussemaster, Jacobsen, Mid-State's Dura-Wash, Phillips Petroleum, Speed Spray and U. S. Chemical Z-4 Cleanomat.

Reed also said while Britt Tech believes its pressure washers do not present hazards if operated according to instructions and warnings and are not modified, severe to fatal shock can occur under certain conditions.

"A shock can occur when the user contacts the metal handle if the machine is ungrounded and a second fault occurs," Reed said. "This could happen if the connection between the power cord and extension cord is wet, or if a fault exists within the washer's electrical system."

Reed warned users to take precautions when operating any electric pressure washer, since the danger of electric shock exists in units produced by manufacturers other than Britt Tech.

"Always use a properly grounded receptacle," Reed said. "If possible use a circuit protected by a ground fault circuit interrupter, which is a true ground."

Users also should follow the manufacturer's warnings and operating instructions carefully and keep all cord connections dry.

Reed said some users may be tempted to remove the ground prong on the end of the power cord or bypass the ground by using an adapter plug. Either can result in a fatal shock.

Britt Tech and other involved companies are providing free materials designed to electrically isolate the pressure washer's handle to prevent potentially fatal shock.

The provision was announced in July by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, which has been involved in the recall of more than 325 million potentially hazardous products since 1973.

To obtain a free safety kit with instructions, consumers may call Britt Tech Corporation toll-free at 1-800-247-0028 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Those who have a machine manufactured under Ford Tractor Company, John Deere or Massey Ferguson trade names should contact the local dealer about the safety kit.

Reed said the company may require the model number, trade name and serial number of the washer, which may be found on a metal or foil number tag on the machine.

DRUG QUIZ

by Curt Scarborough, Ph.D.
Used by permission; all rights reserved by DATE, St. Louis, Mo.

QUESTION—Since the Controlled Substances Act of 1970, which cut back by 90 percent the manufacture of amphetamines (uppers; stimulants), it is no longer possible to divert large amounts of legitimate supplies to be illegally dealt on the streets. Consequently, much of what is sold on the street is fake. What percentage of street amphetamines are fake?

- a) 35%
- b) 55%
- c) 75%
- d) 95%

ANSWER—In a survey of street labs which analyze street drugs at the request of users, parents, and police, Dr. John P. Morgan, associate professor of pharmacology and medicine at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, found that although the drugs still look like the old familiar "black beauties," "white crosses," and "pink hearts," most of them contain legal stimulants such as caffeine, ephedrine, and pseudoephedrine. In 1978, the percentage of fakes was 95 percent, and Dr. Morgan believes it is even higher now.

Correct answer - d.

ASCS issues reminders for 1984 ACR program

Farmers who are participating in the 1984 acreage reduction program for cotton, rice and feed grains must protect their diverted acres from wind and water erosion.

The acreage removed from production is referred to as Acreage Conservation Reserve (ACR) acres to emphasize the conservation aspects of the 1984 program, said Franklin A. Gennin, county executive director for the Pearl River-Hancock ASCS office.

The idled acres may not be harvested, he noted, and grazing is not permitted between May 1 and Oct. 31. The land must be devoted to approved conservation uses sufficient to protect it from soil erosion.

Gennin said farmers are required to use necessary control measures for erosion, insects, weeds and rodents on diverted acres.

"Control measures for weeds need to be sufficient to prevent the spread of weeds and consistent with control practices normally carried out on similar cropland in the area."

Land designated as ACR must be maintained through Dec. 31, 1984, Gennin said. For farms approved for wildlife cover on ACR, the wildlife cover must be left on the land until the spring of 1985.

United Way needs your support

Hancock County's 21st annual United Way campaign is underway with contributions being solicited for 15 local agencies supported through UW.

Letters are being sent to previous contributors and also to additional businesses and residents.

Several volunteers will also be calling on businesses for contributions and setting up payroll deduction plans for employees.

Like many other firms in Hancock County, we at The Sea Coast Echo have been using payroll deductions for United Way over the years. It is amazing how only one, two or four dollars a month from each employee can add up at the end of a quarter.

The 1984 campaign chairman is Hilda Bourg who brings to this year's campaign a proven track record after having served as the 1983 chairman when she exceeded a $45,000 goal by some $2,000.

Waveland Alderman Bob Hubbard serves as 1984 chairman-elect which is a new position in the Hancock County United Way.

The goal is again set at a realistic $45,000 for 1984 and can be reached with the help of everyone.

Many Hancock County residents work in other counties or in other states. If their place of employment has a payroll deduction plan, they can designate their donation to Hancock County's fund.

Through Bourg's help in 1983, the Hancock County United Way was able to bring home the donations of many local residents which were going to other agencies in the areas of their employment.

The United Way serves Hancock Countians of all ages, from Boy and Girls Scouts through Senior Citizens.

Every day of the year United Way-supported agencies are working in Hancock County, helping thousands each year.

Local agencies supported by the United Way include Hancock County Emergency Relief Fund, Gulf Coast Mental Health Program, Mississippi Council of Epilepsy, Inc., American Red Cross-Hancock County Chapter, Hancock County Blood Bank, Senior Citizens Programs, Retired Senior Volunteer Programs (RSVP), Catholic Social Services, Salvation Army, Goodwill Industries, USO (worldwide), Girl Scouts-Gulf Pine Council, Boy Scouts-Cypress District, YM-CA, and the Firemen's Doll and Toy Fund.

We hope that when you are called upon, you will help this very worthwhile drive.

Give the United Way...thanks to you, it works for all of us.

From the Office of the Governor

Governor Bill Allain has officially asked President Reagan to give Mississippi an absolute veto over the storage of nuclear waste within state borders.

In a five-page letter, Governor Allain asked President Reagan to give Mississippi the same absolute veto over waste storage that he has given to the State of Louisiana. Governor Allain outlined in detail the sequence of events that led to the veto for Louisiana, stating that Mississippians want to be treated equitably to Louisiana.

Noting that he had received the absolute veto pledge from Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale, Allain said, "We realize that this is not the only issue of concern to the people of Mississippi and readily acknowledge that it should not be the only issue involved in the presidential campaign. But we do respectfully submit that it is an issue of vital concern to our people, and they have a right to know your position on this issue as soon as possible in order to have ample time in which to intelligently weigh such position in the balance before casting their ballots on November 6, 1984."

The Governor also offered to meet with President Reagan or any members of his staff regarding the issue.

Governor Allain's letter also responded to recent remarks by Robert C. Odle Jr., assistant secretary of energy, that the decision on storage of nuclear waste would be a scientific decision.

"It does not appear that at any time your decision or that of the Department of Energy to give the State of Louisiana absolute veto power was based upon scientific data of any sort," Allain said. In addition, Governor Allain telephoned Odle Thursday morning to clarify his position on the nuclear waste issue. "I told him that we would feel a lot better in Mississippi if we had assurances from the President of the United States regarding any possibility of our selection as a dumping ground. In addition, we wanted Mr. Odle to know that we in Mississippi do understand the federal law on this matter, and we have dealt with this matter for a number of years in a legal manner."

To satisfy the scientific requirements, Governor Allain further noted that many technical matters regarding the Mississippi salt domes in Perry County have not been resolved, most notably, transportation problems, safety of storage in salt, impact on the environment of the Mississippi Gulf Coast, and dangers to populations living near the proposed site.

"Constructing a repository in such a populated area would be utter folly," Allain said, noting that "...nuclear waste would be buried directly under the homes of local residents, unless the government intends to displace these people en masse."

Governor Allain also sent copies of the letter to President Reagan to Sen. John C. Stennis, Sen. Thad Cochran, Cong. Jamie Whitten, Cong. Webb Franklin, Cong. G.V. Montgomery, Cong. Wayne Dowdy, and Cong. Trent Lott. In a cover letter, Governor Allain asked the Congressional delegation for "assistance in obtaining, on behalf of Mississippi, the requested action."

In addition to the letter, Governor Allain also sent President Reagan copies of his reaffirmation telegram to former Louisiana Gov. David Treen; copies of a brochure from the Mississippi State Medical Association, outlining the dangers of nuclear waste; a copy of the absolute veto contract, between Louisiana and the U.S. Department of Energy; and correspondence between President Reagan, the Department of Energy and Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards, reiterating the Louisiana veto.

SUPPORT NEW JAIL—A donation was made this week by Carl Guy, owner of the Waveland Goodyear Tire Store to promote the need for a new Hancock County jail. Those in photo are, from right, Jerry Heitzmann, Hancock County Jail Committee member, Guy, and Dan Foy, store manager. Heitzmann of Hancock Bank, also a former probation supervisor and Hancock County Circuit clerk, said, "We definitely need a new jail in Hancock County. Not so much to benefit the prisoners living conditions as to avoid a law suit which could burden the tax payers of the county for many years to come." Clarice Gustin and Mary M. Perkins serve as co-chairmen for a publicity committee to promote the need for a new jail which is scheduled on the ballot in the November General Election. Businessmen or individuals interested in making a donation can do so at the office of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas).

State Crime Lab director reiterates personnel need

The case load for the Mississippi State Crime Laboratory continued to grow during fiscal year 1984, a laboratory report shows.

The Crime Lab, Mississippi's only complete forensic science laboratory, assisted in the investigation of 6,838 cases in the 12-month period ending June 30, compared to 6,802 the previous year.

"We have experienced major increases in the number of drug cases and blood alcohol cases during the most recent fiscal year," Crime Lab Director Donald Ready said.

"There were also small increases in the number of death investigations and arson cases," he said. "The increase was offset by a significant decrease in the number of document examination cases handled by our agency."

The increased workload was complicated by a major increase in the number of incidents in which Crime Lab specialists were called to testify in court.

"Courtroom testimony is a vital service the Crime Lab offers to people of the state," Ready said. "However, answering subpoenas consumes valuable time that would otherwise be spent analyzing evidence."

"It's an ever-widening circle. The more cases we receive, the more time we spend in court. The more time we spend in court, the less time we have to work on the growing case load."

The cycle has meant that scientists and specialists are required to delay work on cases that are not pending trial, creating a backlog in some sections. Ready said the only answer to eliminating the backlog is adding personnel.

"For several years, we have requested the Legislature to consider additions to our staff," the director said. "The Legislators have been sympathetic, but the state's financial problems have caused us to make do with the staff we now have."

"We certainly respect the Legislature and we appreciate the difficult situation in which the Legislature finds itself."

"We will request additional personnel from the Legislature again during the 1985 session while hoping that the state's economy rebounds," Ready said.

Meanwhile, Ready reports that the thinly-stretched Crime Lab staff is meeting deadlines in preparing cases for trial.

"We do not know of a single trial that has been postponed or delayed because of the work of the Crime Lab," Ready said. "We have been prepared to testify in every instance in which the evidence was properly submitted and in which we have been given sufficient advanced notice that a case is coming to trial."

Commissioner James L. Roberts Jr., head of the Department of Public Safety under whose auspices the Crime Lab functions, described the personnel shortage as "serious."

"The Crime Lab's role in law enforcement in Mississippi is growing larger and is more demanding every day," Roberts said. "Our criminal justice system cannot properly do its job unless the Crime Lab is adequately staffed."

"The Legislators have shown a desire to cooperate with and assist law enforcement, and I am certain our request for additional personnel will be carefully considered," Roberts, a former prosecuting attorney, said.

The Crime Lab's report on activity during the fiscal year shows the number of death investigations increased from 291 in fiscal 1983 to 322 in fiscal 1984; drug cases climbed from 3,179 to 3,648; toxicology and blood alcohol increased from 752 to 846; arson from 223 to 225.

The number of rape cases investigated by the Crime Lab decreased from 264 in fiscal 1983 to 239 in fiscal 1984; document examinations declined from 1,067 to 703; robbery and breaking and entering cases dropped from 797 to 713.

Crime Lab personnel answered 1,553 subpoenas in fiscal 1984 compared to 1,196 in fiscal 1983.

"I am proud of the Mississippi Crime Laboratory and the important role it plays in Mississippi's criminal justice system," Roberts said.

IN CONGRESS By Cong. Trent Lott

Making Prescription Drugs More Affordable

On Sept. 24 President Reagan signed major drug legislation which will make cheaper versions of many widely prescribed drugs available to consumers.

The new law is designed to make inexpensive "generic" copies of many brand-name drugs more widely available to consumers. At the same time, it would grant pharmaceutical firms added financial incentives to develop new drugs, a process that requires years of costly research and regulatory review.

The generic drugs are estimated to retail for 50 to 80 percent less than their brand-name counterparts. But in order for patients to benefit from the low-priced versions, their physicians will have to indicate on the prescription that the generic version can be used.

The passage of this law ends nearly a year of difficult negotiations among the research-based companies that create new drugs, generic-drug makers and representatives of consumers, and the elderly.

But that wide-based alliance reflects the positive achievements the Congress can obtain when it puts its collective minds to it.

The impact of the legislation could be felt before the end of the year if the Federal Drug Administration (FDA), as expected, approves pending applications for generic versions of more than 100 drugs whose patents have expired.

The law directs FDA to expand its use of a fast-track procedure for approving generic drugs which heretofore have not been eligible for the expedited approval.

Currently, a substantial majority of the prescriptions filled in the United States are paid by individuals without substantial assistance from the government or insurers.

As a result of this new law, price competition will drive down the price of many prescription drugs and save the consumer significant amounts of money.

In addition, the government as a health care provider—both through medicare and medicaid and more directly to government employees and military personnel—will save millions through the increased availability of generic drug substitutes.

It is not surprising that this legislation was endorsed by most senior citizen groups who bear the heaviest burden of high-cost medical care.

All too rarely the Congress has a chance to enact legislation as beneficial as the Drug Price Competition Act. I am pleased to see this measure become law.

County Agent's Notes

By Lee Taylor

Fall Pasture Care

Variable weather across the state in recent weeks has pasture and forage crops ranging from good to poor condition.

Hancock County farmers should take a good look at forage needs, then take steps to fine-tune fall and winter production programs.

Clipping pastures now will kill some weeds and reduce late season weed competition. This will allow permanent grasses to provide late summer and early fall grazing.

Continue to rotate cattle grazing to get the best use of the available forage. Where hay is needed, clipping and applying about 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre will provide one or two fall cuttings of hay.

If you plan to plant fields for early grazing, plow them now. Keeping these fields fallow allows plant residue plowed into the soil to decompose and soil moisture to build up for vigorous, uniform stands.

Thin stands and poor response to nitrogen fertilizer can often be traced to the plowing down of green plant material shortly before planting which can tie up the nitrogen when the residue is decomposing.

Chisel or subsoil on the contour compacted soils for good moisture storage and root penetration. Plow only deep enough to break the compaction layer. Apply needed lime at this time and work well into the soil.

Oats, rye and wheat give the earliest fall grazing, so use these crops for early September plantings on prepared seedbeds.

If you choose fescue, plant fungus-free fescue seed. Check the seed tag for fungus infestation.

Harvesting Safety
Harvest marks the end of another growing season and big investment of time, effort and money. Good yields depend on farming skills, land resources and cooperation from Mother Nature. However, accidents can rob Hancock County farmers of part of their profits. Costly mishaps can be avoided by preparing equipment before harvest begins. Safe use of the equipment is also a key factor.

Read the operator's manual and follow the directions for proper use of the equipment. This eliminates costly experiments and could save time in the field.

Keep all shielding in place and stay clear of moving parts that are unguarded.

Turn the machine OFF before unclogging or servicing. Wait until all parts have stopped, especially on choppers and blowers.

Each year, limbs and lives are lost because this basic rule of safety is disregarded to save time in the field.

Adjust ground speed to field and crop conditions. Avoid steep slopes and driving too near ditches. Watch for obstacles that could damage harvesting equipment.

Operate augers, elevators, conveyors, etc., with care. If shields can be used, cover the moving parts as a safety precaution.

Look up, as well as to the front and back, when driving, moving or positioning tall equipment near overhead powerlines. Operate transport vehicles with care, obeying all rules of the road.

Keep the children and non-workers off and safely away from harvesting equipment. Don't allow children to climb or play in storage bins, silos or on hay bales.

Make sure your work crew is trained and competent. Review all safety precautions and enforce their use.

Following these safety guidelines will protect you, your labor and those you love. A safe harvest is the most profitable kind.

DRIVE LIKE HELL, YOU'LL GET THERE is the legend on the front license plate of this vehicle which flipped several times before coming to a halt in a yard off Vacation Lane in Waveland, according to Investigating Officer James Varnell of the Waveland Police Department. Chris Bermond, 19, escaped injuries although his car slid and flipped a total of more than 80 yards from where the tire blew out and he lost control of the vehicle, the officer said. ## New procedure announced for workman's compensation

Attempting to reduce the time in concluding contested Workers' Compensation cases, the Mississippi Workers' Compensation Commission announced a new procedure that would limit each case to one hearing on Oct. 1.

Commission Chairman Marshall Bennett said, "After surveying the pending Workers' Compensation claims, we found an unusually long delay in over 400 cases filed each year. Many delays were up to three to four years in reaching a decision in the workers' compensation claim controversy."

"The use of the current recessed hearing method often resulted in six to eight hearings per case. The Commission felt the delays were unreasonable and unfair to both the claimant and employer."

"An injured worker should not have to wait three to four years to know if he or she is entitled to receive compensation and an employer or a workers' compensation insurance company should not have to keep its money tied up without knowing if it is a liability. Doctors and patients should not have to wait on such a delayed period if a claimant is a compensable one."

"The Workers' Compensation Commission administers the hearing for wage supplement benefits for over 100,000 Mississippi workers who are injured on the job."

"The new procedure is required if a dispute exists. Each year the Commission receives approximately 90,000 claims, 15,000 of which are major lost time, wage-loss and major medical cases. About 1,500 claims are contested each year and the disputes are decided by the commission through hearing procedures conducted by eight administrative judges and three commissioners in all 82 counties.

Bennett said, "This commission just could not sit by and allow this unfair and drawn out procedure to continue to increase the cost of litigation and workers' compensation in Mississippi. We hope the new one-time hearing will speed up the decision process through a fair hearing and reduce the unnecessary delay and the backlog of cases which has built up over the last 10 years under the multi-hearing recess procedure."

"Many employers and workers from over the state have urged us to do something to speed up the hearings and decisions in their cases. We certainly anticipate that this bold new concept will make the Workers' Compensation system in Mississippi more efficient and fairer to all parties."

The new one-hearing procedure will begin to be used in August 1984. Serving on the Mississippi Workers' Compensation Commission with Bennett are Walter M. O'Barr of Biloxi, and O.L. Garmon III of Clarksdale.

Successful retirement requires planning

How do your finances shape up for retirement living? The happiness and success of the years ahead depend on what you do now. People who think, question, and create a future will have one financially.

It is up to you to plan and design your very own family management plan to meet your needs. The process involves decision making. You should consider where you are, what you have, and what you want.

What will your retirement plans cost and can you afford them? Estimating expenses in retirement depends on some important decisions.

One is how you will spend your time. The change in lifestyle during retirement may cost more than you are presently spending.

Focus on your dreams for retirement now by developing interests and activities based on your income at retirement instead of today's income.

The bottom line is with income and assets. Are your dreams of retirement within reach? If not, what can you do about your financial situation?

A net worth statement of assets against outstanding liabilities will help nail down where you are today. Look at the liquid and non-liquid assets, as well as the fixed and variable liabilities.

Budget projections at retirement help families enjoy happiness and financial solvency as plans are made to cover the projections.

Senate study committee to meet in Biloxi Oct. 11

A special Senate Study Committee on Mississippi's Health Care System will hold its October meeting on the Gulf Coast at 10 a.m., Oct. 11 at the Biloxi Hilton.

The committee, which is to make a report of recommendations to the Senate during the January 1985 session, has identified three general areas of study—Medicaid Program; public health which includes the Welfare Department, the State Health Department and the Mental Health Program; and private health care in the aspect of cost containment.

"In an effort to get input from people in the health field and from the public, the committee is holding meetings in Northeast and South Mississippi in addition to Jackson," said Committee Chairman Senator George Smith of Gulfport. "We encourage anyone with suggestions on how to improve our health care system to come."

Anyone wishing to appear before the committee should call Mrs. Joyce Johnson at 359-3234 before Oct. 8.

Mississippi Public Radio certified

Linda Carr Flentje, director of public radio in Mississippi, the new eight-station public radio network under the Mississippi Authority for Educational Television, reports that PRM has been certified by National Public Radio as a full-member station.

The new PRM network joins stations in 49 states, including Alaska and Hawaii as well as Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia, in the nonprofit private corporation, whose primary role is to provide a variety of programming and support services to its members stations.

"We're delighted to be the newest member in the National Public Radio Network. The criteria for membership are very difficult to attain. The very rigid standards that NPR demands are not set so as to exclude stations, but rather to assure that the programming content and presentation are of the highest quality," Flentje said.

NPR's programs have received the highest honors and awards accorded radio production through a satellite delivery system that beams high quality stereo programs throughout the United States, making NPR the first full-time, multiple-channel satellite distributed radio network in the world. Above all, NPR is an acknowledged leader in a medium that serves as a vital source of information and entertainment to a rapidly growing number of Americans.

NPR's programs are as diverse as the human experience. Symphonic and operatic music, folk, bluegrass and jazz performances can be heard live or taped-in-performance; dramas, documentaries, and public affairs all offer new insights into the complexities of everyday life. Congressional hearings, political conventions and other vital public proceedings can be heard in their entirety—all without commercial interruption.

From its inception, NPR has seen its primary role as that of a producer of programs, all intended to augment and enhance the broadcast schedules of local public radio stations. The NPR Board of Directors, which consists of station managers elected from the system and public members elected by the managers, determines priorities in programming and other services provided by NPR.

PRM affiliate stations include Biloxi, 90.3 FM.

News Briefs

ATLANTIC WIDENING

According to NASA scientists, the Atlantic Ocean is widening by six-tenths of an inch each year, reports 'International Wildlife' magazine.

LARGEST BEE

The world's largest bee, last spotted in 1859, has been rediscovered in Indonesia by a University of Georgia student, reports 'International Wildlife' magazine. The bee, which grows to the size of a small hummingbird, "blundered into me," says entomologist Adam Messer, who has since located seven colonies of the bees on three islands.

VEHICLES COLLIDE ON LONGFELLOW—The driver of a third vehicle was cited for causing a head-on collision on Wednesday morning on Longfellow Drive by the National Guard Armory. The vehicle at left was driven by Fitzgerald Ladner traveling north and the other by Mrs. Annabell Fayard, traveling south, according to Hancock County Deputy Sheriff Nathan Hoda. The deputy said a third vehicle being driven by Thomas Cain, apparently turned in front of the Ladner vehicle causing him to swerve into the on coming Fayard vehicle. Cain was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way, Hoda said. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas).

Cars collide on Longfellow

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A head-on collision caused by a third vehicle occurred on Longfellow Drive near the National Guard Armory on Wednesday.

Hancock County Deputy Sheriff Nathan Hoda said a vehicle driven by Fitzgerald Ladner was traveling north and another by Mrs. Annabell Fayard south hit head-on when a third vehicle driven by Thomas Cain turned in front of the Ladner vehicle causing him to swerve.

Hoda said that Cain was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way.

Mrs. Fayard was taken to Gulfport Memorial Hospital by Mobile Medic Ambulance Service, treated and released, according to a hospital spokesman.

Ladner was treated for multiple contusions and abrasions at Hancock General Hospital and released, according to Mary M. Perkins, public relations director.

There were four passengers in the Fayard vehicle Hoda reported.

Perkins said, Maryella Holden, was admitted at HGH for a fractured left wrist.

Hoda was assisted by Lee Morrison, Hancock County auxiliary deputy sheriff, and Captain Robert Butler, Bay St. Louis police department, and Waveland Patrolman John Wilkerson in traffic control at the accident.

CONSUMER UPDATE

On savings alternatives
American consumers lose billions yearly by leaving more than $250 billion in passbook savings accounts earning only 5.5 percent interest, when they could be earning 8 to 12 percent interest from other savings instruments that are both safe and readily available.

To help clear up confusion over banking deregulation, a new pamphlet, "Your Savings Options," is being offered free by the Consumer Federation of America, 1314 14th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

On taxes

You can take an itemized deduction for the cost of a safe deposit box, provided the box holds stocks or bonds that produce taxable income.

You cannot take a deduction if it contains only personal papers or tax-exempt securities.

On trends concerning American families

In 1965, the traditional family of father, stay-at-home mother, and children constituted 60 percent of all American families. By 1980, this traditional family constituted just 11 percent of all families.

There are now 30,000 people over the age of 100. By 2000 there will be 100,000 people over the age of 100. Right now, 2.2 million are older than 85 years of age.

On books to read

VA questions

Editor's Note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available from Mike Ladner, Hancock County veterans service officer, 467-2100.

Q— What are the eligibility requirements for an automobile grant from the VA?

A— A veteran or service person must have service-connected loss or permanent loss of use of one or both hands or feet or permanent impairment of vision of both eyes to a specified degree. For eligible persons the VA will make a one-time payment of not more than $4,400 toward purchase of an automobile or other conveyance.

Q— When seeking a VA home loan, may a veteran pay or may a seller charge more than the VA appraisal?

A— Yes, but the loan itself may not exceed the appraised value except when funding fees are added to the loan. Generally, the veteran must pay all costs over the appraisal in cash.

Nutrient-saving tips to preserve food value

Getting the most out of the food dollar is the aim of every shopper and homemaker in Mississippi.

Almost as important to modern shoppers in a health-conscious nation is getting the most nutritive value from foods.

It takes some savvy to save pennies at the supermarket, and it takes some sagacity to get the most nutritionally out of foods bought.

Nutrients vary greatly in stability. Carbohydrates, for example, are little affected by handling, storing or cooking. But some vitamins such as vitamin C are easily lost from some foods.

Vitamin C is soluble in water, and exposure to air and heat hastens its loss.

Nutrient-saving tips are valuable to the shopper and homemaker and vitamin C offers a good index to the retention of other nutrients.

Trimming

Outer leaves of lettuce are coarser than the inner, tender leaves but have higher values of calcium, iron and vitamin A. In trimming cabbage, remember the core as well as the leaves is high in vitamin C.

The leafy parts of collard greens, turnip greens and kale have much more vitamin A than the stems or midribs.

Storing

Vegetables such as kale, spinach, broccoli, turnip greens, chard and salad greens should be refrigerated promptly in a vegetable crisper or in moisture-proof bags to retain their moisture content and freshness. Their nutrients keep best at temperatures near freezing, at high humidity and away from exposure to air.

Cabbage, which is a more stable source of vitamin C than most leafy vegetables, should not be allowed to dry out. If it is to be stored in a crisper for a few days it should be wrapped to protect its moisture content.

Unripe tomatoes keep their nutrients best if they are ripened away from sunlight at temperatures from 60 degrees to 75 degrees F. Cover them with a cloth to ripen.

Don't put tomatoes on a hot window sill or in the refrigerator. They'll get soft and watery in the refrigerator.

Held at room temperature, tomatoes that are ripe and firm will retain their vitamin C for several days.

Cooking

To conserve maximum food value, cook vegetables until tender in just enough water to prevent scorching. Use a pan with a tight-fitting lid. Remember, the less water used, the more nutrients retained.

Boiling root and tuber vegetables—carrots, sweet potatoes, potatoes—in their skins retains more vitamins and minerals than cooking them peeled and cut.

Stir-frying is a good method for conserving nutrients in the juicier vegetables such as cabbage, summer squash, kale and collards.

Holding and Reheating

Cooking enough food for later meals saves time at the expense of nutrients. Cooked vegetables reheated after two or three days in the refrigerator have only one-third to one-half as much vitamin C as when prepared while fresh.

Fruits and Fruit Juices

Vitamin A value varies from fruit to fruit. Apricots, peaches, cantaloupes of the deeply-colored varieties, mangoes and papayas are high in the vitamin.

Vitamin C is well retained in citrus fruits and juices, which can be canned or frozen with little loss of the vitamin. Whole citrus fruits keep their nutrients well for several days at room temperature or down to 60 degrees F.

Orange juice, whether freshly squeezed, canned or reconstituted from frozen concentrate, can be kept in the refrigerator for several days before any vitamin C is lost.

Berries are highly perishable, losing vitamin C quickly if bruised. They need careful handling to conserve nutrients.

Canned Foods

Generally, the longer the storage period and the higher the storage temperature, the greater the loss of nutrients.

When stored for a year at 65 degrees F, canned foods lose about 10 percent vitamin C. Canned tomato juice shows virtually no loss of carotene, a forerunner of vitamin A, in storage.

To get the full nutritive value from vegetables, serve any liquid packed with the vegetables. Use it in gravy or soup.

Frozen Foods

Little vitamin C is lost in freezing fruits. To maintain the nutrients and quality of frozen food, the freezer temperature should be 0 degrees F or lower.

Thawing and refreezing food should be avoided because it adversely affects nutrients and flavor and can cause spoilage.

Meat, Poultry and Fish

Meat, poultry and fish provide fat, minerals, vitamins and high-quality protein. Liver is especially rich in protein, B vitamins, minerals and vitamin A. Pork is an exceptionally good source of thiamine.

Meat stock or broth can be used to enhance the nutritive values of soups or in scalloped and creamed dishes.

Meats shrink in weight and volume as they cook and lose some thiamine and vitamin B. Rare roast beef conserves more thiamine than well-done beef.

When properly packaged, frozen meat, poultry and fish compare favorably with fresh products in food value.

Milk

Keep milk cold, covered and away from strong light. Riboflavin, an important nutrient, may be lost in direct sunlight or artificial light.

Diet studies show Americans get 66 percent of their calcium, about 50 percent of their riboflavin and more than 20 percent of their protein from milk and milk products.

Calcium, protein and vitamin A keep well in milk. The calcium and protein values stay about the same whether the milk is whole, skim or reconstituted from nonfat dry milk or evaporated milk.

Skim milk contains little vitamin A unless it is fortified.

Pasteurization of raw milk does not destroy the principal nutrients.

Eggs

Eggs supply high-quality protein, with two eggs providing as much protein as two ounces of cooked hamburger. Egg yolk is a rich source of iron. Eggs also supply vitamin A and riboflavin.

Eggs, whether in the shell or dried, retain most of their nutrients well when they have been properly stored and cooked. Proper storage means keeping shell eggs in the refrigerator or in cold storage.

The short cooking period and the low temperatures used are probably the reason eggs retain their nutrients so well.

During Capt. Phelps' tenure, Mooney said, NORDA has expanded greatly in size and expertise and established itself as the leading navy laboratory in ocean environmental and acoustic research and development.

Mooney also commented on the recently opened $6.5 million ocean science center building which was planned, funded and built during Phelps' time as commanding officer.

He congratulated Phelps on leading NORDA in its completion of initial 5-year goals, in only two and a half years.

Phelps established NORDA's fleet interaction office, Mooney said, to help NORDA scientists become more aware of the needs of the fleet and for the fleet to be more aware of NORDA's unique capabilities.

Finally, Mooney gave credit to Phelps' wife, Betty and children, Lynne, Janet and Scott, who he said have been a great factor in Phelps' accomplishments.

Mooney challenged the new commanding officer, Capt. Onorati, to continue guiding NORDA toward being the center of excellence it was created for and to meet the challenges and opportunities of the future.

Onorati had been serving as deputy director of the Surface Officer Distribution Division for the Naval Military Personnel Command in Washington D.C., before coming to Hancock County to assume his duties here.

He was a battalion officer at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md. and has had tours of duty as the commanding officer of the USS Gray and as the executive officer of USS Gridley.

A 1981 graduate of the Naval academy, he also was awarded a master's degree in oceanography from the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif.

Onorati is a native of Philadelphia, Pa. and attended high school in Tenafly, N.J.

is functioning as well as can be expected for a single-cell lagoon, which is an outmoded system."

"Right now the Waveland treatment plant discharge doesn't appear to be having an adverse effect on Edwards Bayou," Seyforth said.

Johnson added that the water quality at Edwards is considerably better than that of Watts Bayou.

Seyforth indicated that some follow-up tests are tentatively being scheduled in the same area, but said he does not know yet when they will begin.

Waveland zoning board nixes monthly stipend

By DENA BISNETTE

The members of the Waveland Planning and Zoning Board have turned down a gratuity offered to them by the city board of aldermen.

The aldermen had voted that the planning and zoning board members, who currently receive no salaries, be paid gratuities of $25 per month.

The vote was subject to the acceptance or rejection of the zoning board.

The zoning board members voted Tuesday to reject the payment, although they will continue to accept reimbursements for expenses such as out-of-town trips, according to Zoning Board Chairman Charles Dickson.

Dickson said he felt it would be better for the board to continue operating in its current fashion than to accept money for its services.

In other business, the board took a request from Richard Salinger for a rezoning of two lots between Fahey Street and Bismarck Street under advisement. The lots are zoned C-3, a commercial zoning, and the request asks that they be rezoned R-1, which allows only single-family residences.

The board also heard from attorney Gerald Gex and his client Luke Caruso, who opposes a requested zoning change for property owned by Michael Perniciaro.

Acting on behalf of his client, Gex submitted a petition signed by property owners living near Perniciaro's lot on Faith Street between Gladstone and Ladner Streets.

Perniciaro would like to establish a business on the property, but those opposed want the area to remain a residential neighborhood.

Since Perniciaro already owns two adjacent lots that have commercial zonings, the board decided to consult with its attorney before making a decision on the matter.

A special meeting on the request has been set for 4:45 p.m. Oct. 15.

The zoning board also voted to make a recommendation that the city have a carport on Amar Street torn down because it was constructed without a building permit and does not meet city zoning standards.

After 3 games

CEHS undefeated in 8-man football

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Coast Episcopal High School began their football program this year and are playing eight-man football. They are undefeated after two games and will travel to Gulfport Friday to play the Bible Baptist School. Gametime is 7:30 p.m. The following is a report on eight-man football and the CEHS squad by Tim Helm, a sophomore.

Eight-man football is very similar to 11-man football. All the rules are the same except that in eight-man football the tackles can go out for a pass which they can not do on an 11-man team.

The three players who used are one back and two ends. The size of the field is smaller. Instead of the regular 50 by 100 yard field, it is reduced to 40 by 80 yards.

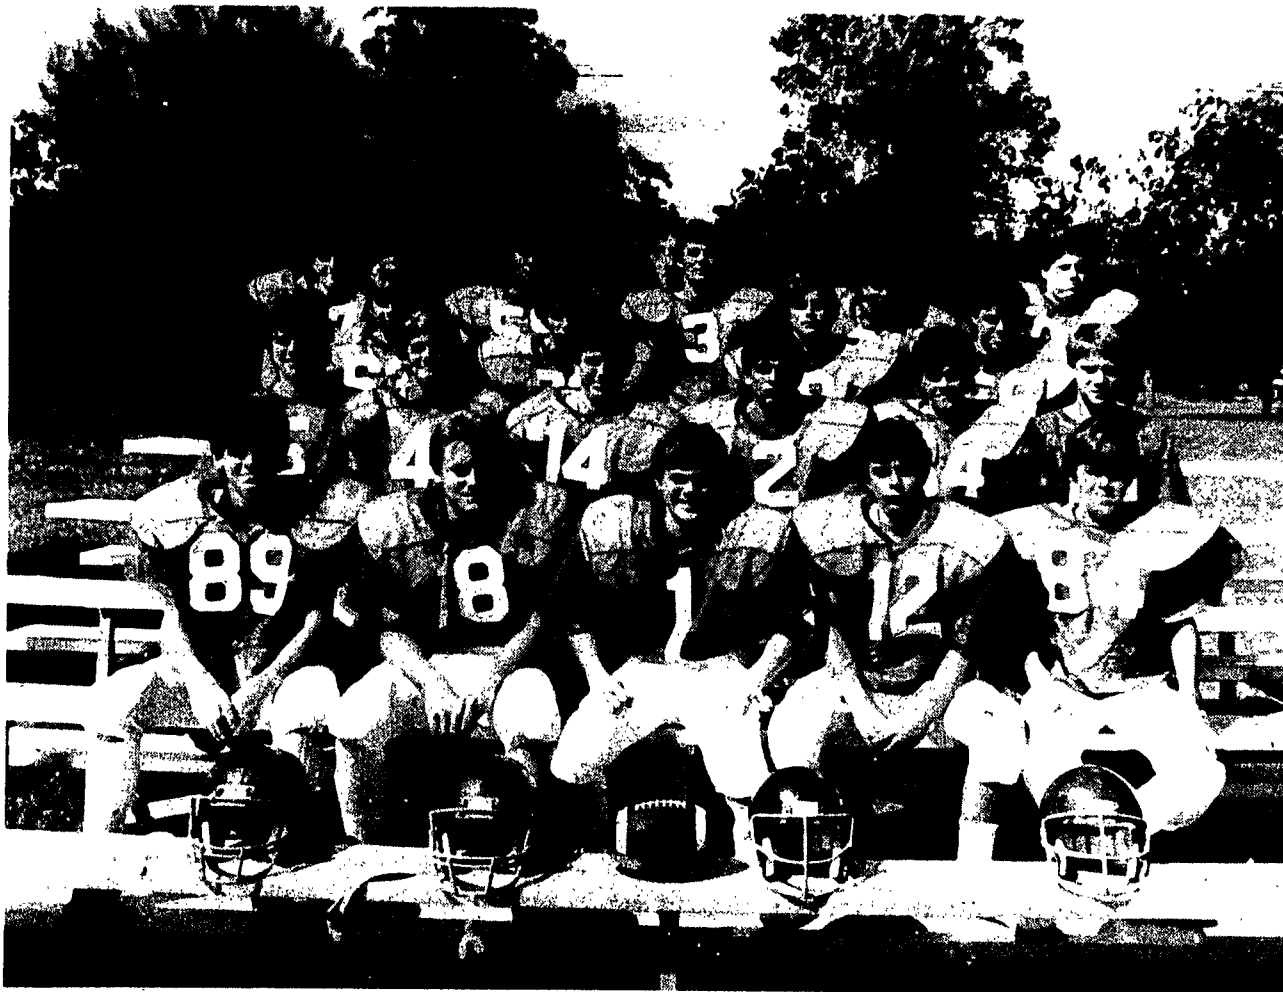

Eight-man football is a very exciting sport for smaller schools. There are presently leagues in the state of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. It is in its eighth year in Mississippi.

The Coast Episcopal team has a full slate of seven games. The Red Raider mentor is local veteran coach, Kearney Bobinger of Gulfport.

Bobinger brings over nine years of experience in coaching to CEHS. In his last coaching stint at Our Lady of Victories in Pascagoula, Coach Bobinger recorded a career winning percentage in the excess of 90 percent.

The team has played two games and have a 1-1 record.

The Homecoming game will be held Oct. 6, with a full day of activities planned at the high school beginning with the elementary school field day and including the crowning of a queen.
